REF: Training for GED and Adult High School Instructors

DATE: February 9, 2001

The NC Community College System is offering the first of a series of trainings on the GED 2002 and Adult High School Instructional Strategies. The first of the series is called "Changing the Learning Environment with Meaningful Math." We are offering it in conjunction with the Adult Basic Skills Professional Development Project at Appalachian State University.

There will be seven workshops across the state to accommodate everyone. Registration at each site will be limited to 25 people. Dianne Barber, Ed.S from Appalachian State University, math professor, will offer the workshop with application oriented instruction in such items as use of the scientific calculators and using math instruction across the curriculum. I will begin the day by giving participants an overview of the content of the GED tests for 2002 and the policy status of the Adult High School program.

I hope you will take advantage of this unique training opportunity and send your GED & AHS instructors. Expectations for the GED and Adult High School will rise due to the higher standards expected of high school graduates now. It is our hope that this workshop and the following in the series will assist instructors in helping their students meet these higher expectations.

To register, see the attached form and e-mail or fax it to Cheryl Self, Training Assistant, (919) 733-7051, ext. 451. For questions, please feel free to contact me at ext. 722 or Linda Ray, Training Specialist, at ext. 723. I am looking forward to seeing you.
