

CCR Monthly Email Update - April

Student Success Stories

One of the wonderful things about working in College and Career Readiness is seeing students succeed. We want to share their stories through our social media channels and possibly with the news media. We would like your help in identifying students who have shown themselves to be effective advocates and representatives for your organization and adult literacy in general.

While we understand each of our students have amazing stories to tell, please consider the criteria below to help guide you in making the best selection.

Student success stories should:

- Exemplify how CCR has provided tools, resources and guidance so the student could choose the best education path that has or is leading them to a sustainable career
- Promote, support and advance any of the 13 considerations required by WIOA; these include an increased emphasis on alignment of activities with regional needs identified in local plans under Title I; serving individuals with disabilities; instructional activities based on rigorous research; effective use of technology; activities that promote integrated education and training; and coordination with education, training, employers, and social service providers to promote career pathways
- Identify any data points that convey how compelling the student's success is, such as first one of the family to graduate, single parent, etc.
- Unique, and not a story that hasn't been overly publicized locally

Submit your success story via email to Jannai Johnson at johnsonj@nccommunitycolleges.edu with subject line: Student Success Story for "Provider Name" by May 15, 2019. Please be sure to identify a contact person within your organization.

We look forward to hearing from you. Thank you for your help!

Integrated English Literacy and Civics Education (IELCE) Retreat

IELCE grantees participated a in a two-day retreat on March 21-22, 2019 located in Summerfield, North Carolina. The purpose of the retreat was to provide a collaborative atmosphere for providers that have elected to engage in the IELCE Occupation READY Alignment Project. The retreat focused on IELCE program design, curriculum design, lesson plans and reviewing programmatic self-assessments. During the retreat, programs had an opportunity to collaborate and review each other's curriculum and Integrated Education and Training (IET) templates. Programs discussed and identified pertinent programmatic information, as well as focused on contextualization of academic content. Additionally, providers had an opportunity to review and critique curriculum that will be used as IET models. To improve standardization of academic content, programs developed a uniform lesson planning format for all IELCE programs. The lesson planning tool commoncurriculum.com was utilized to standardize the IELCE curriculum. Upon completion of Occupation READY project, the NCCCS office has planned to publish the lesson plans by uploading the documents to Moodle. For more information about Occupation READY, please contact Arbony Cooper-Gibbs.
